How to Exercise Your Colorado Privacy Rights

Generally

If you are a Colorado resident that interacts with us in an individual or household capacity (and not in a commercial or employment context), you may request to exercise your Colorado privacy rights by contacting us using the information provided in the Contact Us section of this Colorado Privacy Notice.

Please note that if you opt-out of Profiling, your experience with our website and other sites that we own or operate will be less personalized.

Please also note that opting out of targeted advertising does not mean that you will no longer see advertisements from us, or that your experience when using our website and other sites that we own or operate will not be personalized based on your activity on our website or our other sites. Rather, the advertisements you will see will no longer be tailored to you based on the combination of your activity on our website and other sites that we own or operate, and your activity on non-affiliated websites, applications, and online services.

An authorized agent may submit a request to exercise your right to opt-out of targeting advertising on your behalf by contacting us using the information provided in the Contact Us section of this Colorado Privacy Notice. Please note that an authorized agent must have your authority to submit a request to opt-out of targeted advertising on your behalf.

Authentication

If you submit a request to exercise your Colorado privacy rights, we must authenticate your identity—typically through your submission of sufficient information for us to reasonably verify you are the consumer about whom we have collected personal information—before we can fulfill your request. You are not required to create a password-protected account with us to submit or authenticate a consumer request, but we may require you to use an existing account.

To authenticate your identity, we generally require the matching of sufficient information you provide to us with your request to the information we maintain about you in our systems. This may involve sending you a link to verify your email address and/or requesting additional information or documentation solely for the purpose of authenticating your identity. Third-party service providers may assist us with authentication to prevent the disclosure of your personal information resulting from fraudulent requests. Although we endeavor to limit the personal information collected in connection with requests to exercise your Colorado privacy rights, this may require us to obtain personal information from you. We will review the information provided and may request additional information from you to ensure we are interacting with the correct individual.

If you authorize another person to act on your behalf for the purpose of exercising your right to opt-out of targeted advertising, the CPA also requires us to authenticate, with commercially reasonable effort, your identity and your authorized agent's authority to act on your behalf. Before fulfilling a request from an authorized agent, we may contact you directly to confirm that you have given your authorization to the agent and/or to verify your identity.

In certain circumstances, we may decline a request, particularly where we are unable to authenticate your identity or if we, at our sole discretion, reasonably believe the request is manifestly unfounded, excessive, or repetitive. If we are unable to comply with your request in whole or in part, we will notify you with the reasons for the denial.

Providing & Revoking Your Consent

We do not process any sensitive data at this time, and will not do so in the future without your consent. As a Colorado resident, you also have the right to revoke your consent given to us for the processing of your personal data.

You may provide your consent, or submit a request to exercise your right to revoke your consent, by contacting us using the information provided in the Contact Us section of this Colorado Privacy Notice.

Appeals

If your request is denied, you may appeal our decision by contacting us using the contact details in the Contact Us section of this Colorado Privacy Notice, with the subject line "Colorado Resident: Appeal of Request Denial," and attaching both the communication from us explaining why we were unable to fulfill your request, as well as your response to the reasons stated for our denial in the original communication. We will respond to your appeal within the time required by Colorado law. In the event that your appeal is denied, you have the ability to file a complaint with the Colorado Attorney General regarding any concerns you may have with the result of your appeal.
